

ADVANCING SUICIDE PREVENTION Through Telehealth and Policy Development

May 24, 2026 | 12:00–2:00 p.m. ET
Soulful RENEW Center at Beach El Peñascal
San Bartolo, Lima, Peru
2.0 CE Credits | In-Person Program

About the CE Session

This advanced-level continuing education program provides an evidence-informed review of suicide prevention practices within contemporary behavioral health, with emphasis on telehealth delivery and policy-related access considerations for rural and underserved populations. Content is grounded in established psychological theory and contemporary peer-reviewed scientific literature, including systematic reviews, meta-analyses, randomized controlled trials, epidemiological research, and psychometric studies. Instruction focuses on structured suicide risk assessment frameworks (C-SSRS, PHQ-9 Item 9, CAMS), collaborative safety planning, formulation-based risk determination, measurement-based care, and telehealth-adapted crisis procedures. The Interpersonal Psychological Theory of Suicide (IPT) and ideation-to-action frameworks are presented as empirically supported conceptual models. Telehealth-specific considerations—including technological disruptions, jurisdictional differences, and reduced behavioral observation—are examined alongside ethical, legal, and policy standards for risk mitigation.

Learning Objectives

Upon completion of this program, participants will be able to:

- Differentiate suicide risk indicators by identifying at least five suicide risk factors, three protective factors, and three warning signs across diverse populations, including groups experiencing heightened risk due to structural and social determinants.
- Administer and interpret at least two evidence-based suicide risk assessment approaches/tools (e.g., C-SSRS, PHQ-9, CAMS) and formulate an initial risk determination using case-based or applied telehealth scenarios, consistent with ethical practice guidelines.
- Apply at least three ethical, legal, and policy standards relevant to suicide prevention in telehealth (e.g., HIPAA/privacy and documentation requirements, duty to protect/warn, telehealth safety/emergency protocols) when evaluating and managing suicide risk.
- Integrate at least two culturally responsive strategies and at least two trauma-informed strategies into suicide prevention care (assessment, safety planning, treatment planning, or crisis response) to strengthen client safety, engagement, and clinical outcomes.
